

5

REASONS

To use an ACA Filing Service

1.

You, the employer are held responsible. (Not your broker.)

Many small businesses depend on an insurance broker to help them navigate health care and related coverage. Brokers are a great resource, but the IRS holds the business responsible for compliance.

Penalties are significant and add up quickly.

With complicated filing requirements, numerous penalties, and assessments applied per-employee, non-compliance can get really expensive, really fast. There are ACA penalties for failing to offer affordable coverage and failing to furnish documentation of the coverage, as well as late fees. Protect your business with on-time filing that's done right.

$2,970 fee per FT employee for failure to offer affordable coverage

Failure to file ACA with the IRS can result in penalties up to $630 per return.

3.

ACA is really complex for anyone who isn't an expert

With so many intricacies and unique reporting requirements, it's easy to misinterpret or miss a step on a form. And missteps can be detrimental to your bottom line.

Compliance requires timely, accurate completion of multiple tax forms with varying federal and state deadlines.

The "grace period" has officially ended.

The IRS eliminated the Good Faith clause for filings, which means it's even more critical to have your information submitted correctly to avoid penalties.

5. You and your employees have other priorities.

Chances are, you didn't become a business owner to file government documents. A filing service will free you and your team
